

A mother bird brings food to her young ones. When she approaches the nest, she sings and the young ones open their mouths wide. The mother drops the food to every opened mouth. Any unopened mouth will not be fed. If this mouth will remain shut several days, the young one will die of hunger. The mother has provided the food for all, but one dies of hunger!

It may sound strange when you hear such statement as being rich is your true nature and is a portion for every human being, while poverty is a man-made phenomenon and it is subject to the settings. Have you asked yourself why in the same situation, some people are clinging to the top while others are toiling to make the ends meet? The former harnessed their inner value while the later have been spoiled by the settings. Man was made to control his environment and make it the way he wants. Contrary to this, the environment has been given the power to decide how human being is to run it.

All people are born with inner power to help them exploit the resources from the environment. Those who discover this, are enjoying the treasures of the earth. When the environment shapes the behaviour of people, a long-lasting character is born and we call it culture. This culture will affect the majority positively and negatively. Find your proper placement on Earth by reading this book. Your life and your attitude will never be the same again. Discover the giant in you!!!!!!!!!!
